

Prepositional Phrases: Adding Interest, Meaning, and Variety

A prepositional phrase adds interest, meaning, and variety to sentences. Below is a paragraph that has no prepositional phrases. Rewrite the paragraph, adding at least ten prepositional phrases to it. Use the phrases in different locations, such as the beginning or end of a sentence. Underline the prepositional phrases that you add. You may add other words and phrases.

Della's Day

The school day was finished. Della walked home. She passed the mall. She wanted to go there because her friends would be there soon. When she got home, she asked her mother if she could go. Her mother said she could. She could stay two hours. Outside Della started to run, but fell. Her knee was scraped. She limped inside. Her mother cleaned and bandaged it. Her mother drove her instead.

The last school day of the year was finished. After the last bell Della walked to her home. On her way she passed the mall. She wanted to go to the mall because her friends would be there soon. When she got home, she asked her mother if she could go. Her mother said she could go for two hours. Outside of her house Della started to run, but she fell on the sidewalk. The skin on her knee was scraped. She limped inside. Her mother cleaned it with soap and water and bandaged it. Her mother drove her to the mall instead.

Prepositional Phrases: Adding Interest, Meaning, and Variety

A prepositional phrase adds interest, meaning, and variety to sentences. Below is a paragraph that has no prepositional phrases. Rewrite the paragraph, adding at least ten prepositional phrases to it. Use the phrases in different locations, such as the beginning or end of a sentence. Underline the prepositional phrases that you add. You may add other words and phrases.

Della's Day

The school day was finished. Della walked home. She passed the mall. She wanted to go there because her friends would be there soon. When she got home, she asked her mother if she could go. Her mother said she could. She could stay two hours. Outside Della started to run, but fell. Her knee was scraped. She limped inside. Her mother cleaned and bandaged it. Her mother drove her instead.

Answers: Student's choice. Example of correct answers:

The last school day of the year was finished. After the last bell Della walked to her home. On her way she passed the mall. She wanted to go to the mall because her friends would be there soon. When she got home, she asked her mother if she could go. Her mother said she could go for two hours. Outside of her house Della started to run, but she fell on the sidewalk. The

skin on her knee was scraped. She limped inside. Her mother cleaned it with soap and water and bandaged it. Her mother drove her to the mall instead.